The relevance of a foreign language in the modern world, the problems arising in the study of a foreign language are considered. A foreign language is the road to the future. Solutions to problems in language learning and methods of learning it are considered.

Key words: foreign languages, socialization, the role of foreign languages.

In the modern world the ability to speak foreign languages and understand them is a very necessary skill for people. Take, for example, international trade, which is impossible without knowledge of the English language. Also, knowledge of another language introduces us to the culture of the nation that uses this language, that is, if we stop learning foreign languages, this will lead to intercultural insensitivity, which will not generate understanding among people, but it will be a disaster. I have already cited several facts about why knowledge of a foreign language is important, but that's not all. Now knowledge of a foreign language either can be called “modern fashion”, because no matter how many people I meet in my life, each of them knew a different language or would like to learn it. If you look at social polls, you can immediately tell what language learning is needed for. Some people want to work in large international companies, others to travel to different countries, and still others just want to understand someone else's mentality. It's great that the knowledge of languages is so relevant nowadays. But there are some nuances when studying them. So, for example, most people believe that listening is a great difficulty in learning, since each locality has its own accent, its own pronunciation and tempo of speaking. But now people have come up with a solution to this too. So let's highlight the actual problems of the language and write out their solutions.

1. Language barrier. The problem is that people cannot express their thoughts in a foreign language even after a long time. Most often, the language barrier arises for those people who have little language practice or too little vocabulary. Therefore, the best solution to this problem is to increase speaking practice.

2. Misunderstanding of speech by ear. The problem is again the lack of practice, only now it is listening. To overcome difficulties in understanding speech by ear, you can start listening to songs in a foreign language, watching films or TV shows with subtitles.

3. Small vocabulary and forgetfulness. The essence of the problem lies in the rare use of a new word. A person sees a word, writes it down in a dictionary, but since he does not use it in his speech the next time he simply does not remember it, therefore it is necessary to repeat the previously written words and make sentences with them. That swings a small vocabulary. Everything is simple here. You need to set yourself a clear number of words that you will have to learn every day.

I have listed the most pressing problems in this area, but despite these difficulties, there are more and more people who study foreign languages every year. Humanity needs knowledge of languages. I think knowing other languages makes life extraordinary. You can understand what others are talking about and you can also keep up conversations with them, you can learn about the mentality and culture of the country and also make good friends. Knowing more than one language completely turns your mind around and inspires. Of course, everyone has their own goals in learning the language, but somehow we all have one desire - to speak the language fluently. But it's hard to learn a language on your own, as most people think, based on the survey, so people turn to professionals in this matter. They are already beginning to teach us and offer us various methods that ultimately lead to a positive result, but this, of course, if you work hard. After all, learning languages is not as easy as it seems. Examples of techniques:

1. Pimsler's method. This English course, designed specifically for Russian speakers by Dr. Paul Pimsler, is designed for business people who do not have much free time. In fact, it is the only patented memory training method. Each level consists of 30 sessions lasting 30 minutes. It is during this period of time, according to Pimsler, that the human brain is most actively assimilating new information. There are 3 levels in the course. Classes are conducted by two speakers - a native English speaker and a Russian speaker. Particular attention is paid to working on pronunciation, as well as learning the vocabulary necessary for everyday communication. The student's task is to listen to the announcers and complete their assignments.

2. Dmitry Perov's technique. The method of studying foreign languages of the famous polyglot Dmitry Petrov is considered one of the most popular today. Studying English using this method gives a good basic knowledge, which is confirmed by the numerous reviews of students. However, you should not believe that a miracle will happen and you will learn a language using this method in just 3 weeks. But during this period, if you really work on yourself, you can develop a good base. The advantage of the technique is that it is designed to remove the psychological barrier that interferes with speaking in a foreign language, helps to relax and is focused specifically on improving spoken English. Basic constructions and common vocabulary are brought to automatism. In addition, all explanations are quite accessible and understandable.

3. Mullure's method. This technique helps to improve the skills of speaking, writing, reading and speaking. It is highly effective due to a combination of effects on the conscious and unconscious. Mueller's method is based on the achievements of Russian and Western science - super-learning and holographic memory. Overtraining allows you to accelerate the acquisition of any skills several times. It also applies to learning foreign languages. To start the processes of super-learning and holographic memory you need to: relax, straighten up; try to convince yourself that you are fluent in English; further, if you did everything correctly, the process of over-learning should be activated, that is, you will be able to remember and build phrases in English.

Take, for example, English, which is an international language that supports communication with other countries. In it, the passive voice and the study of times are of great difficulty. But this language is studied because it is simply necessary for communicating with other people. Now is the time to highlight the importance of the English language, which, in my opinion, is the most important in the modern world. After all, the importance of the English language is so great that not knowing it is a privilege and a luxury.

1. International trade, as I mentioned earlier.
2. Understanding of others, that is socialization.
3. International economics.
4. International politics.
5. Growth on the career ladder, thanks to the knowledge of languages.
6. Opportunity to study at the best universities in the world.
7. Understanding of the greatest works of the world, the essence of which no translation will convey.

8. Ability to better understand pop culture.

Also, knowledge of a foreign language develops intelligence, helps to feel confident in travel and opens the way to another world. To understand how relevant knowledge of a foreign language is, I looked at sociological polls, among which I highlighted several points for what people need a foreign language:

1. Desire to freely express your thoughts in a foreign language.
2. Desire to travel independently and discover new corners of the world.
3. Reading literature in the original.
4. Reading news in a foreign language to see the situation through the eyes of foreigners.
5. Desire to watch films in a foreign language and understand them.
6. Promotion.
7. A desire to help your child learn.
8. The desire to understand business partners on their own, so sometimes it is inappropriate to take a translator.
9. Singing in a foreign language.
10. Hobbies.

Conclusion:

In conclusion, I want to say that knowledge of foreign languages is necessary in the modern world, as it expands our horizons and opportunities. Knowledge of the language gives people tremendous benefits. This helps to achieve great heights in life. People exchange different ideas, scientists from different countries discuss scientific discoveries and all this leads to progress in all spheres of society.
